Speaker Tells Anti-Vivisection Congress Theory of Relationship Is Not Distasteful.

While half a dozen women in her audience blushed and looked uncomfortable in handsome sealekin coats. Miss Lind-af-Hageby, of London, in the closing session of the International Anti-Vivisection and Animal Congress at the Raleigh late yeaterday afternoon, declared that women who wear sealakin coats ought to be ashamed of themselves. "The women who wear sealakin coats are as cruel as the men who get the seals and bloed them alive for women-ignormst and shannefully ignorant women to wear on their backs," she said. Miss Lind-af-Hageby admitted that she did not find the theory of a relationship

The so-casted "chapet" in the large hall on the exet side of the second floor of Columbian College. Hefore the building was secupied by the suivarsity, this room served as the chapel of the St. Ross Industrial Home Schiol, which was located on the premises. The windows are of stained glass and at the roar is a choir loft. The hall now is used by the classes in English. Being the largest hall in the university, it is likewise used for the daily chapel services. And because of this use, the room has come to be known universally as "the chapel." J. L. SMITH IS HONOR GUEST. United Spanish War Veterans Hold

Students of George Washington Uni-eraity suddenly have become conscience-tricken. A wast ain, if seemix rests upon the helr souls, and it will give them no it is never been looked upon as sacrings. But it nevertheless has been very embersa-it nevertheless has been very emparaseling.

"Won't you come to the dance in the chapet tonight?" many a young student has asked of a fale malder. And she has frequently looked at him twice and then
interrogated:
"Where?"
"Why, in the chapet," is his reply, and by this time if the young malded has not fainted, he proceeds to explain that it is not a real sure-enough omsecrated chaped
but only a so-called one.

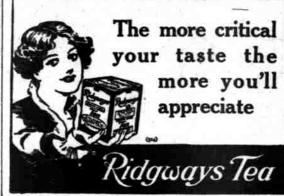

New Name Suggested.

But no great attention was given to the matter until a few days ago, wher some very conscisome very conscientious student ad-dressed a letter to the University Hatches, suggesting that the name "chapel" be disaspeciated. And now all the students are beginning to realise fully what a dreadfully embarrassing misunomer it is, and a search is being made for a more appropriate name. It has been suggested that it be named Wilbor Hall in honor of Dean Wilbor, who always has taken an active interest in student activities. Used for Meetlangs.

But these are not the only uses of the hall. Frequently stadent meetings are held in it is used for meetings of giosculus, for debating purposes, and also, data! mel fact, for dancing. Not intrequently "rag time" strains float through the chapsel and students gibte over the floor in the execution of the latest and most popular dances.

We regret that any of our patrons and other friends should have been disappointed in discovering, after coming to the Percy S. Forter Plano Company's music hall, in the Foster Building, 1230 G street northwest, last night to attend a complimentary recital advertised by The Washington Herald yesterday morning, that the last of the series of recitals with which we have been celebrating the third anniversary of our eccupancy of our present quarters was hold Wednesday night.

It has been a great pleasure for us to have our friends as guests, and if, after the announcement was made, it had been possible to arrange another recital, we should giadly have done so. As this was impossible, however, we shall in the near future give another recital, of which announcement will be made, both to accommodate those disappointed last night and these who were unable to obtain admission Wednesday night because the "standing room only sign" had to be displayed.
